What he sees are the little valley towns and villages where the people are accus-tomed to a more modest community life than is to be found on the coastal urban centres.

Consequently, what these people want from government is simple: Roads and hospi-tals and bridges. They are a long way from sophisticated political questions like the need for green belts and rapid transit, or the dangers of high-rise living.

It doesn't seem an unhealthy sign, for example, that a big lumber mill is only a few blocks from the main intersection in Merritt.

It's the kind of riding that .. should by all reckoning lap up the frontier politics of Social Pipeline the worst season they can re-member in terms of late ice. Injunction

WASHINGTON (CP) — A federal judge dissolved his injunction today against the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline and dismissed all the objections raised by American and Canadian conservationists to the controversial project.

Judge George Hart said it "can be confidently antici-pated" that the final decision in the protracted legal case will rest with the United States Supreme Court. And lawyers for the conserva-tionists said they will file no-tice of appeal with the U.S. appeals court, probably by Judge Hart originally halted construction of the $3 billion project to require the interior department to comply with environmental protection laws by holding public hearings and issuing detailed state-ments about the pipeline and alternative methods of getting vast oil reserves of northern Alaska to markets in the mainland U.S.

Today's hearing was devoted to arguments that the pipeline construction would require permanent alienation of public lands in excess of those which the law allows.

Dennis Flannery, a lawyer speaking for both Canadian and American conserva-tionists who oppose the pipeline, said that the interior department and the oil company consortium had tried to sell the court a "bill of goods". that restrictions in the law are meaningless. In fact, he said, when Congress passed the Mineral Leasing Act in 1920 it specifically debated how much land was necessary

Momentous Decision

Yesterday's opening of the Alaska pipeline hearing in Washington revived interest in an important public issue that from sheer weight of time and words has lately taken a back seat in the news. The hearing gives opponents of the proposed line across Alaska to Valdez and the supertanker route down the coast to Cherry Point in Washington an opportunity to repeat their environmental objections, and to offer the alternative of an overland route up Canada's Mackenzie Valley to Edmonton and thence south to the United States border.

The latter route offers numerous advantages, including better control of possible pollution through oil spills, and a prospect of putting a second pipeline for gas transmission alongside the oil line. As the leading Canadian opponent of the tanker route, Mr. David Anderson has joined with United States conservation interests in presenting a case to the Washington hearing. Yesterday, there were more controllable than the open-encouraging indications that the judge was giving consideration to some of the points made regarding gas disposal and the Canadian route, but since both sides have said they will pursue the matter to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary, it may be many months before a decision is reached.

In the meantime, millions of dollars have been spent on stockpiling pipeline and equipment in the north, vast tankers are being built for the coastal trade, and there is every indication that the industry considers the case virtually settled. The argument that millions have already been spent has some practical weight but it certainly has no bearing on the real core of the question, which concerns how much damage, both calculated and potential, can be permitted to the environment in order to get the oil supplies moving at an earlier date than caution dictates.

The Mackenzie route is by no means free of contamination dangers. But they appear to be end hazards which are inescapable in the tanker proposal. The heavy marine traffic, especially at the southern end of the route in Puget Sound, the chancy West Coast weather, the probability of human error, the irreversible calamity that would result from a major oil spill — these present a gamble that neither nation can afford. The time factor is not a strong enough argument to overcome that fact.

Research

The federal science ministry has recommended that a computerized audit of research in science be extended to cover all research in the public and private sectors. The National Science Library information exchange centre in Ottawa is already used as an embryonic audit of scientific research. The new policy would go considerably beyond that recommended by the Lamontagne Committee on Science Policy; it restricted its scope to "projects being supported by public funds."

It has been argued that a complete index of scientific doings would facilitate the government's co-ordination of scientific work and, further, could be used to form policy on what research is justified and what is not.

As Canada gropes towards a comprehensive science policy commensurate with the increasing stature of science in our lives the government will come under increasing demands to follow this or that course.

The new Science ministry has its work cut out for it - but then so does the layman whose opinions and certainly whose taxes should finally determine what bureaucrats and what scientists move to the centres of power. The new audit could perhaps be accompanied by appropriate commentary and intelligent analysis which would allow the layman to "stay tuned."

-Hang On

Do you remember when the opposition parties of the British Columbia government opposed the taking over of the B.C. Electric - which act was passed without a dissenting vote? Do you remember when they opposed the building of the two power dams? They said we did not need the electricity. We would be short of power now if they had had their

Do you remember them demanding more money to educate more teachers we couldn't afford and now don't need?

Perhaps you also remember their opposition to the buying of the ferry system - then found it so good they demanded wider roads to the terminals. Now they are built they blame the Government for spoiling the countryside and also demand more ferries to take care of the peak traffic.

The platforms of most of the Social Credit opponents are ridiculous in the few places where they differ from the present government's. For example liquor outlets in grocery stores, more taxes for education and cancellation of recent labor laws: The Federal Labor Department reports almost five million man-days lost through work stoppage - (to use a simple word "strikes") - in the first six months of this year. A waste of more than enough production to solve the problem of rapid inflation. Yet some ambitious contestants are promising cancellation of the legislation now in effect which could end this terrible waste and which deserves full public support and legal application. Increases in wages should not come from price increases as in the past but rather from extra profits resulting from no lock-outs or strikes and more efficient production methods.

We are lucky to live in British Columbia. We are lucky to have a Social Credit government and a leader whose accomplishments for the people he serves cannot honestly be challenged. His opponents do not criticize his present mental capacity - they only hope for its collapse. Besides - can any of them guarantee that their own lives and mental abilities will outlast his?

I say let's hang onto a good thing or we will most likely regret the day we let it go. - J.B.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of Aug. 15, 1912:

In an errorless game of hall Victoria squeezed out a win yesterday. Take it all through, the game was the prettiest so far this series and that is saying a lot. Despite the righteous anger which surged within his breast when Umpire Van Haltren miscalled some of his finest "corner-cutters," "Kiddo" Wilson pitched in rare form. So did Melkle for five innings, but in the last three times Victoria batted the Tiger twirler loosened up and the Bees counted some telling blows.

What Kind of Police Force?

uproar here over the hiring and unhiring of an American as chief of police was a double-barrelled question. To wit: How does a city go about deciding what kind of a police force it wants; and who should make the choice? When the police commission decided to choose the kind without bothering with the first part, it only added to the confusion.

Thirty or even 20 years ago, it would have been a meaningless question. There was only one kind of a police force anywhere in western Canada - the hardnosed kind composed of at least 80 per cent of highland Scots of formidable stature and imposing brawn. Winnipeg, for example, would not hire a recruit under six feet, and made them even more intimidating by topping them with London bobby-type helmets

Aside from Scottish ancestry any prospective policeman needed strong arches, soundness of wind and limb and patience to wait 20 years for a promo-

Single Purpose

The police departments had a single purpose in life: protecting persons and property with heavy emphasis on the latter and an overweening concern for order in the streets. Police training consisted mainly in being instructed how to try front and back doors of business premises after closing time, how to watch for stolen property and how to get to know the people on the beat,

Reliance, in solving most crimes, was placed on having efficient networks of informers among the prostitutes and petty crooks of the town. Officers assigned to a local criminal case would pursue it relentlessly until a solution was found, even if it required long hours of unpaidfor overtime.

The great virtue of this system was that it worked well enough to keep the natives from becoming restive. Certainly the kind of corruption that has afflicted American police forces for 100 years was unheard of in western Canada.

By just being around, policemen were a deterrent to criminal activity. Because so much of their work was physical handling of law-breakers it was natural for physical prowess to be a prime require ment, along with courage and quick reaction. Excessive cerebration was neither required nor even desired.

But the automobile explosion, noholds-barred boozing and the dawning of the long hair age, at a time when social protest was becoming fashionable, endlessly complicated policing the cities. In Calgary there has been a great deal of public pushing and shoving over the stance the police should be taking since Mayor Rod Sykes took office three years ago. He kicked it off with the striking of a permissive posture at an illstarred rock festival. That set in motion the inexorable opposite reaction, a demand from a segment of the citizenry for more aggressive law enforcement.

The police department, staffed mainly caught in the middle. Chief Duke Kent. who could not stand the heat, elected to get out of the kitchen.

A Very Different Job

On one hand, the "modernists" rate mere law enforcement well below getting onto a proper wave-length with the community, with such ethereal concepts as social engineering and prime preven tive sociology. The oldsters brush all this off as coddling crooks in a permissive society rotting at the core.

But regardless of the attitude, in Calgary as elsewhere the winds of change are blowing around law enforcement agencies. The strong-backed, heavy-handed cop must become part traffic engineer, part emergency nurse, part narcotics spotter, part drunk pacifier, and part public ralations practitioner cum legal adviser and family counsellor.

Are the old-time cops who have risen to the top of prairie police departments sufficiently visionary, flexible and innovative to devise programs that will bring their forces into conformity with the times? In Calgary, the policeman's union insists they are, and point to many revolutionary changes to prove it."

looking for a new chief, somebody had so cooked the paramaters that few of the resident applicants could cut the mustard. Instead of an ability to run a lawand-order, protection-of-persons-andproperty police force, it demanded:

"One qualified in criminology, administration, law and psychology; a respected, innovative leader with a record of success in pioneering new concepts in crime prevention; who possesses the analytic abilities to identify objectives and priorities for a police agency in a rapidly changing and complex social environment and who is flexible and comfortable in dealing with the concerns of all is a police commission secret. But it is hardly surprising that the commission had to go all the way down to California to find a cop to fit its parameters.

To hard-shell, conservative Calgarians the job description was more a catalogue of the qualities needed for a bleeding heart social worker than a boss of a law enforcement agency. In the debate that led to the city council decision repudiating the police commission's choice of the Californian, several aldermen noted an unhappiness with the lack of emphasis on law enforcement.

As one policeman commented to this reporter: "In a crime ridden-town like Oakland with its Negro ghetto, sprawling harbor and industrialization, a guy with any human sympathy could put a hell of a record together for trying new ways of combatting crime. Even bringing peace to the police force would be a small mir-

"But none of the conditions - racial hatreds, slums, violence - that are part of that environment are part of ours. Hell, you can safely walk the streets of any western city day or night, for one thing. So what Calgary needs is a police chief who is aware of our Canadian environment and our Canadian problems, not somebody who has been collecting Brownie points for accomplishment in a completely different set of circumstances."

It all comes back to the beginning. What kind of a police force do the prairie cities need today, how do they go about finding out and then how do they go about getting it? Over the next decade, the uproar which was engendered in Calgary and mislabelled as a simple exercise in nationalistic exuberance, may set forces in motion which will produce some answers five or 10 years hence

Can McGovern Follow HST?

Historical analogies, a tricky game at any time, has been played with even less imagination than usual in ren that commentators on nator McGovern's prospects have been able to devise with the disastrous Goldwater campaign of 1964. Perhaps it lingering professional embarrassment over the classic case of a miscalled election that keeps them from stretching back to 1948.

They might refresh their memories by glancing at Eric F. Goldman's lively account of those years in The Crucial

"As the Democratic convention came on, with Harry Truman announcing that it would be Harry Truman on the firstballot, leaders from all wing to escape him." Goldman de-scribes how "a crazy-quilt coalition of big-city bosses, New Dealish politicos, and South-ern machine leaders" desper-ately labored to convince Elsenhower to stand for the Democratic nomination. When Eisenhower telegraphed his definitive refusal, Goldman records that "Boss Frank Hague read the Eisenhower telegram and crunched out his cigar. 'Truman, Harry Truman. Oh my God'.''

Truman did win on the first ballot, and the rest of course is perfectly well remembered. Historical Analogies, as I said, is a tricky game. It can easily become a kind of intel-lectual hat trick: you pull your Goldwater out of your hat, I slip my Truman out of

Anyone who wishes to take such analogies more seriously ought to be prepared to specify just wherein the analogy repeating itself - exactly how the two cases differ.

The striking resemblance etween the Truman and McGovern candidacies is not only that the pollsters predicted disaster for both, but that the professional politicians

Mr. Bennett is definitely in that stage. There are a number of things that crop up — some small, some big — that make one think it would be best for the province if someone on such a grasping ego trip would be relieved of his position.

There are such minor but significant items as the progression of the green-and-white color motif. The colors of the Social Credit party of course, are green-and-white. The B.C. interesting thing is who fills the gap when the serious scholars and advisers who provinces are excluded in this one. Bennett spurns the advice of many qualified people. He has few advisers, fewer friends. Instead he surrounds himself with the Ekmans, the Clanceys, the Kenmuirs, the Worleys flacks and sales men of Social Credit.

They have achieved promy liation with the old man who apparently likes salesmen around him. It is a strange role for a strong man seems to want only such figures around him, but there it One wonders whether he hears too often only what he

If he were to meet with an accident, the cabinet would dissolve brown sugar. He seems intent on doing what Joey Small-wood did—leaving such a weak structure behind him as if in perverse vindication to not survive his going.

THE PLATFORM OF THE LIBERAL PARTY IN B.C. FOR THE 1972 PROVINCIAL ELECTION

Here's what will happen in British Columbia in the Anderson years. JOBS

Mobilize the Department of Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce and the private sector in the '70's to expand secondary industry and increase jobs.

2. Focus emphasis on job expanding secondary industry.
2. A co-ordinated program to help people, new to the work force, to develop job skills.
4. More processing of our raw materials in the province to provide more secondary industry basic to B.C.

SECONDARY INDUSTRY

SECONDARY INDUSTRY

5. Establish a major incentive program with a $100,000,000 fund to expand existing secondary industries and bring new industry to B.C.

6. Work closely with communities throughout B.C. to determine what types of industry will be most acceptable in each area.

7. Expand export trade with Pacific rim countries.

8. Encourage companies in Pacific rim countries who are seeking distribution in North America to establish branch plants in B.C.

LABOUR-MANAGEMENT

RELATIONS In the last report on days feet through strikes (May 1972) there were over a million days lest in Canada. Over 700,000 of these were lest in British Columbia. This has to stop. The Anderson government, rather than leaning in the direction of big labour or big business, will work on behalf of people.

S. Abolish the Mediation Commission.
Replace it with arbitrators acceptable to both union and management.

10. Set up an Industrial Council with representatives from labour, management and the government to work for better understanding and to propose cooperative approaches for problems as they arise, and to anticipate them before they arise.

11. Encourage the automatic cost-of-anticipate them before they arise.

11. Encourage the automatic cost-of-living clause in contracts.

12. Introduce proper negotialing procedures for the public service.

THE ENVIRONMENT THE ENVIRONMENT
David Anderson has a proud record of achievement as the leading figure in B.C.'s political life to work for the protection of our environment.
Preservation of the environment is not incompatible with the preservation of jobs. In fact, environmental concerns will open up entirely new fields, products and processes and with them
job opportunities.

13. Create a Department of the Environment. Give the Minister the major voice in the control of pollution and the protection of the environment.

14. Establish a clearing house for inforproblems.

15. Make available to the public the research obtained by the information clearing house.

18. Keep the Skagit Valley for permanent recreation and park land.

17. Enact an environmental policy act to guarantee full studies of potential environmental damage before any construction work can be undertaken.

taken.

18. Enforce green strip legislation to preserve vegetation beside streams and rivers.

19. Provide the fish and game branch with an adequate budget to carry out enforcement of regulations and scientific research.

THE ELDERLY Our objective is to replace fear of age with pride in age.

20. Through Provincial supplements to Federal Pensions we will guarantee a monthly Income, fixed to the cost of living for all persons sixty-five years and over. This amount will not be below $200 per month.

21. All medicines prescribed by a physician will be available at no charge. Likewise, all medical appliances and other essential aids will be provided at no charge.

All hospital services, acute care, extended care, intermediate or chronic care will be provided at the standard B.C. Hospital Insurance fee.

23. A Provincially financed housing programme designed to increase the number of homes and apartments for the elderly. Defer municipal home taxation until the home is sold.

24. Free passes on B.C. Hydro busses.

25. In co-operation with the Federal Government, local community offices will be established to ensure all those sixty-five years and over obtain all their entitled benefits.

HEALTH AND MEDICAL SERVICES

Health and medical services are amongst the more important basic services required by the entire

28. Cancel the Involvement of four separate ministers (Fleatth and Hospital Insurance, Welfare, Labour and the Provincial Secretary) and place financial responsibility in the harids of one person, the Minister of Health.

28. Establish "satellite clinics" linked to major hospitals to provide emergency services and public health care.

30. Include dental care for those below the poverty income levels.

31. Double the support for the U.B.C. Medical School and increase continuing medical education.

32. Train para-medical personnel and physicians' assistants.

YOUTH

The future of our province will be in the hands of the youth of today. Yet, so many of them have never had a job. Not even a summer job.

Re-examine our concepts of what the role of the modern school should be in the society of today and 33. Re-examine

35. Require that all secondary schools, junior colleges and universities provide a comprehensive job search training program.

36. Involve the youth of the province in the organizational work, planning and implementation of the new Department of the Environment because it will have a direct bearing on their lives as citizens of the province.

EDUCATION

In this competitive world, we cannot allow B.C.'s educational system to fall behind the rest of the world.

We must all be involved in the educational process—the student, the parent, the teacher.

37. Remove all costs of education from taxes on residential and farm lands and finance through general.

38. Reduce the size of classes, to at least the national average, and finance the hiring of teachers aids to give the individual needed help.

40. Require that counsellors and other teaching specialises be properly trained and qualified in their specialities.

41. Develop educational television including post-secondary programs for adults. Finance community colleges out of general revenues.

42. Use school facilities for community activities.

43. Encourage communities to become actively involved in the program and the services of each school.

44. Supply special help needed for the education of the handicapped.

45. All high school students seeking a drivers license shall complete a driver training program to be offered by the high schools.

HOUSING

Housing is a major "people" problem.

Efforts must be made to make neighbourhoods more livable and to develop batter Integrated communities.

46. Co-operate with federal government on a vastly expanded building program of housing units within cities and the renovation of existing units.

47. Develop complete communities or towns at new locations instead of uncontrolled urban sprawi.

48. Establish a "Renter's Grant" in an amount equal to the Home Owner's Grant on any residential unit after one year in that dwelling.

PEOPLE POLICIES

People are David Anderson's top priority. His administration will make government services more responsive to the needs of the people.

49. Increase consumer protection legislation, especially in the areas of pyramid selling, warranties and home repairs, and hire the staff needed to enforce the laws.

50. Repeat the ban on liquor and tobacco advertising. It is bad legislation which has not worked and thus makes a mockery of the law, discriminating against B.C. publications.

51. Allow beer and wine to be sold in grocery stores.

52. Permit the development of neighbourhood pubs.

53. Provide legal aid to all persons unable to afford it.

54. Provide day care centers and homemaker services, through assistance to communities.

to communities.

55. To reduce welfare rolls — provide increased vocational training and programs to encourage the unemployed to develop better job search skills.

STATUS OF WOMEN

While there has been much talk about improving the status of women, particularly in the work situation, little has been accomplished in B.G. The Anderson government has plane for specific improvements.

56. Ensure that women have equal rights with men in education including universities, vocational, technical and professional schools.

57. Guarantee that equal pay legislation in B.C., will be enforced so that skill, effort and responsibility will be the objective criteria in determining what is equal work.

58. Increase the number of women on

58. Increase the number of women on provincial boards, commissions, corporations councils, advisory committees and task forces.

59. Ensure that provincial protective labour legislation be applicable to labour legisl both sexes.

LEISURE TIME AND RECREATION

The increased leisure time of the future will require that new recreational facilities be constructed immediately.

60. There must be more campsites and picnic areas and provincial parks within easy weekend access of the heavily-populated areas patrolled and staffed by qualified park rangers.

53. Encourage the development of low-cost ski areas close to the centers of population.

64. Support and encourage local agencies and organizations that provide summer camps for both young and old.

65. Support community recreational programs and the development of local recreational facilities.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

David Anderson has said, "It's all on the books. We don't have to introduce new legislation to improve the lot of our native peoples, merely extend to them the legislation which is there already, as we do for everyone else,

80. Allow individuals the right to take legal action against the government in introduce improved and fair expropriation and compensation laws to provide for the right of appeal.

TRANSPORTATION

There is a remarkable fiction abroad that B.C. has adequate roads. It is far that B.C. has adequate roade, it is far from the truth. The Anderson government will place great emphasis on cooperation with municipalities on mass transportation, rapid transit facilities and the up-grading of the provincial road system-immediately.

ROADS 82. Develop the shorter route to the Cariboo - Chilcotin area by improving the road through Squamish and by completing the Pemberton - Lilloéet section.

83. Improve the Hope - Princeton and Southern trans-provincial highways.

84. Give immediate priority to solving the highway bottleneck at Hope.

85. Consult with regional authorities to establish other highway priorities.

FERRIES

> North Vancouver Beats Glace Bay

EDMONTON (CP) - North Vancouver Jaycees, scoring in each of the first three innings, defeated Glace Bay, 6-2, in the first game of the Canadian major Little League baseball championships Monday. Alan Myles was the win-ning pitcher, allowing Glace Bay only four hits.

The first time Calgary scrimmaged, Keeling hit Kerr for a 51-yard pass. Three plays later, Shaw nabbed a 14-yard toss for a touchdown.

Shaw added his 70-yard touchdown, and fourth in quarter. Larry Robinson boot-ed a convert and added two field goals for the Stampeders who led 7-3 after the first quarter and 16-6 at the half.

The Lions rallied in the final 15 minutes after a scoreless third quarter when Bunce combined with fullback Jim Evenson for a 25-yard

GAMBLE FAILS

Later in the quarter, how-ever, the Lions gambled on third down deep in their own end and lost possession when Koinzan hit Moorhead for a six-yard loss.

It was enough to prevent the Lions from winning their first league game at McMahon Stadium since 1966.

Ted Gerela got seven points goals, one from 39 yards, and convert. Punter Eric thrie compelled B.C.'s Guthrie compelled scoring with a 54-yard single in the fourth quarter.

Except for Bunce, who took the third quarter before he was repilaced by Moorhead later in the game, the Lions didn't look sharp offensively.

Evenson was their top rusher with 49 yards on nine carries, while Jim Young led in pass receiving with 49 yards on two receptions.

Moorhead and Bunce only completed seven of 27 passes for 107 yards.

Keeling went all the way for Calgary and completed 12 of 18 passes for 245 yards. Shaw nabbed four for 108 yards.

In rushing, Calgary fullback Hugh McKinnis picked up 60 yards on 16 carries.

WFRF SUPPORTING AMATEUR SPORTS $15,000,000 PERMANENT

Amateur sports activities touch the life of nearly every young person in British Columbia. The policy of the Social Credit Government is to provide wholehearted support through the $15,000,000 Physical Pitness and Amateur Sports Fund.

Interest earnings, which now total more than $1,500,000 per year, are made available by your Social Credit Government to voluntary, non-profit, sports-governing bodies throughout the province ... for the development of all types of amateur sports.

The fund provides for awards and scholarships to encourage athletic excellence... and for a province-wide coaching program, which includes training camps and clinics headed by internationally-experienced coaches. This program is already helping to develop an increasing number of world-calibre athletes from British Columbia.

But the long-range aim of this permanent $15,000,000 fund is to encourage physical fitness and healthful recreation at all levels among the tens of thousands of British Columbians, young and old, who might otherwise not have a chance to benefit from these activities.

Your Social Credit Government does more than talk about the need to encourage amateur sports — it acts, with a program of direct financial support that benefits people in every corner of British Columbia.

Marriages may be made in heaven, but they fall apart on

And, trying to put them back together again makes up 20 per cent of the average social worker's case load.

Workers at Family and Children's Service (FCS) say "a high percentage of all the families we deal with in our work have a marriage problem.

Miss Zakia Husain, Gerry Webb, Mrs. Edith Frankham Harry Kushner and Ted Nowotniak work with FCS neighborhood teams in the community.

Webb pointed out that couples who want to solve their problems must be willing to change and do something about their relationship.

"There must be a strong element of committment and willingness to be involved to make a healthy marriage,"

Mrs. Frankham says counsellors sometimes don't attempt to save a marriage.

break up without too much bitterness.

The counsellors are encountering a new problem these ys. Young unmarried couples are coming to them with marriage problems.

"A young person today can go through several marriage relationships and carry the same mistakes from one to another," Mrs. Frankham said.

Miss Husain thinks these common law marriages lack the se of responsibility and committment needed for a healthy

She says a lot of young girls refuse to ask for support money when a common law marriage breaks up because "he was always free to go."

Ignorant of Their Rolees

Miss Husain believes most young couples embark on marriage ignorant of male and female roles.

"The schools must begin to teach young people about life because the family can no longer provide this education in our complex society," she said.

Referring to the censored family life section of the health course for elementary school students, Miss Husain said: "Human relationships can be cut out of a book but not out of

At the time Education Minister Donald Brothers said: Would you want some 19-year-old teaching your children

"We encounter the eruptions caused by this lack of information in our work," Miss Husain said.

Counsellors agree that education in communication and human relations would prevent many marriage breakdowns.

They want the schools to educate children in the roles they will play later on in life as marriage partners and

"Many young people now adopt destructive roles copied from their parents," Miss Husain said. "This cycle will go on She would like all young couples to have pre-marital counselling: "This prevents future trouble to a great degree and develops a habit of seeking professional help."

Mrs. Frankham pointed out that most people are ashamed to seek help for emotional problems. "People feel they should be able to cope," she said.

Webb thinks many hesitate to ask for help because they have the idea that counselling will last for months.

"Only four or five sessions are involved," Webb said. Counsellors prefer to see husband and wife together but will arrange single interviews if necessary.

"I would prefer to educate young people so that mar-iages succeed rather than work to patch up older marriages," Miss Husain said.

She believes society fails to provide information needed by people in trouble: "People know enough to go to a doctor-for a physical pain, but don't know where to go for help with emotional pain."

One place to go for help is the Greater Victoria Citizens'

The centre has 20 trained volunteers available for mar-riage counselling. Volunteers train for two years at weekly workshops during the winter months and the annual summer seminar on marriage and family counselling held in Banff.

Many substances not recognized as poisons

This is the second of eight articles on how to accident-proof your home and yard.

By DAVID HENDIN Special to the Times

There are more than a half million different kinds of dangerous medicines, cleaning aids, cosmetic aids, pesticides and other household products and substances that have been suppliered by children. been swallowed by children.

Your home contains hundreds of these substances and many of them are not commonly recognized as poi-of children will swallow poisonous materials. Half of them will be seriously in-jured, and many will die from poisoning. Will your child be one of them?

The somewhat shocking staics reveal that fully 95 per cent of the reported cases of cidental poisonings have occurred when the children were supposedly under the su-pervision of parents or other adult. Moreover, 90 per cent of all reported cases of poi-soning involve children five years old and younger.

What you must do is poison-proof your home — and do it today. Don't postpone this simple but vital task. For fur-thing. Youngsters have been known to drink full containers of kerosene and not be both-ered at all by the taste. When a child finds something new, one of the first things he does must teach him as early as possible not to put things into his mouth and not to eat or drink things you have not given him specifically as food or medicine.

Medicine is not early; never call it that to entice a child to take it. Remember that cough syrups look like soft drinks and many coated medicine tablets look like candy-coated chocolates. candy-coated chocolates.

Aspirin, especially children's aspirin, is the most common cause of accidental poisoning of children. A bottle of 50 children's aspirin tablets can kill a child.

can kill a child.

Keep aspirin and all other chemicals and medications out of a child's reach, even if the bottles have "safety caps." These caps are more difficult for a child to remove than normal caps, but it is not impossible for a child to remove them.

move them.

Here are a few suggestions for keeping your home safe from poisonings:

Keep all chemicals in their original containers. If you put chemicals in milk or soft drink bottles or cans your child may mistake these deadly poisons for the good and healthful products usually found in these containers. • Keep all medicines, cleaning agents, pesticides and other chemicals out of a child's reach. Lock those cabi-mets over.

When you take out a bottle of medicine, be sure to put it away.

Like most accidents, poisoning is best cured by prevention. If you suspect your child has swallowed a poisonous substance, here are words of advice from poison control "In all cases it is important to remember to get the poison out or dilute the poison. Remember — if anyone swal-lows poison it is an emergency. (Any nonfood substance is a potential poison).

Always call for help promptly."

You "get the poison out" by causing the child to vomit. You must not cause vomiting • The child is unconous or having fits.

• The child has swallowed a strong corrosive such as ammonia, bleach, lye prod-ucts, sulfuric, nitric or hydrochloric acids.

• The swallowed poison contains kerosene, gasoline or other petroleum products.

If the child has eaten any of the above, do not make him vomit. Instead, if he is conscious, give him a glass of milk and get him to the nearest hospital.

If vomiting is indicated you may induce it by tickling the back of his throat with your

Do not waste time waiting for the child to vomit if he does not do so right away. Take him immediately to the doctor or emergency room. Bring the container or package from which the poison came and leave any remain-ing sample of the poison infor identification pur-

Reid-Meredith Introduces "The Spun Air" Wig

There's almost nothing to it . . . the "almost nothing" is in the cap. Full of holes and full of air and so lightweight that when you wear it you can forget it. All of Reid-Meredith's caps are lightweight. But "The Spun Air" is carried to the lightest extreme. In a process that's something like dropping stitches in crocheting, but a lot more scientific, the Reid-Meredith people came up with these spun knit bands held together by gossamer threads. gram explains it.) The result is a bantam-weight air-conditioner, right there on top of your head. Cool breezes can blow through it, but your hair can't show through. "The Spun Air" of Dynel, the modacrylic fiber that behaves itself better than your own hair, comes in colors especially blended to look natural (in a range of 16 interesting shades). And, of course, an expert in our Wig Salon will cut and shape it for you. "The Spun Air" comes in two different styles. Each of them really pretty. And really nothing. Easily handled, too. teacher at North Mercer junior high school, Mercer Island, Seattle, said the hardest thing about the trip "was the bicycle seat" and lack of showers.

The group rode out of Seattle four months and four days

Members of the group, who call themselves Cycle-Mates, range in age from 13 to 15 years. Each carried with his own pup tent, sleeping bag, tool kit and clothing.

The group slept in the open except in bad weather when they sought a church basement or some other shelter.

Enjoy Brilliance Of Colors Now

The last two weeks of August usually marks the peak of color in gardens where color has been painstakingly planned with bedding annuals and perennials.

Petunias and ageratum snapdragons and dianthuses are all slow in flowering unless given an early start in a slightly heated greenhouse in February.

Even so, cool weather after they are planted into the garden keeps them back. The advantage is the development of larger root systems with the end result that the late summer display can be superlatively fine.

This is often the case of nature making up for time lost to dul days, for nature never really wastes anything.

The so-called African and French marigolds (they could better be named American, for most of the intensive breeding has taken place in the United States) have grown beautifully in the past warm weeks. Now they come into bloom which should last until sharp frost cuts them down.

In warm locations, usually against colored stucco walls holding the sun's warmth, I have seen canna plants blooming. In spite of their tropical parentage, the handsome purple-red and green leaves developed well during July and now the scarlet, pink and yellow flowers emerge like giant gladiolus Planted in heavy soil with no protection of wall or suntrapping shrubs, cannas will not bloom outdoors here, though making the attempt during September just at the time of first frost. In the best of summers, they flower earlier if their fleshy roots are started in pots indoors during late March.

Dahlias are coming into bloom everywhere as are gladioli; just as well since the annual show of the Victoria Gladiolus and Dahlia Society is scheduled for August 19 and 20, Saturday and Sunday this week.

The location for this show may be a new experience for some visitors — The Leonardo da Vinci Centre at 195 Bay Street. Easy to reach, too.

Summer is now looking toward fall, a stablizing period of growth and preparation for next year's delight of spring and summer color. While summer is here, enjoy the brilliance of color, storing it away to draw on for happy memories.

In this situation, the proper play is to (ever) finesse the jack, as opposed to playing the ace and king to fell the queen. But when declarer's combined holding in a suit consists of nine cards headed by the A-K-J-, the correct play is to cash the ace and king, hoping to fell the queen, rather than to finesse the jack (never) against the defender's queen.

One of the old-time guides

At four of the tables, a sixdiamond contract was reached. At three of these tables, the contract was de-feated by two tricks, for de-clarer, after drawing trumps, cashed the king and ace of clubs, hoping to fell the queen (nine, never). When the queen did not fall, the defenders eventually made a club trick, a heart, and a spade.

But at the table where the above bidding sequence took place, the contract was ful-filled. After capturing East's clarer cashed the ace, king, and queen of trumps, picking up the adverse pieces. He then paused for a long time.

Finally he led the king of low club When West followed suit with the seven, declarer inserted dummy's jack. As is evident, the jack won the trick. The ace of clubs then felled West's queen, and on the fifth club declarer dis-carded his losing heart: After a spade lead was next taken jack became his twelfth trick.

At the completion of play, a kibitzer asked South how come he finessed against the club queen, instead of playing the king and ace to catch the queen. This was the answer.

Well, I must finesse with eight. The question in my mind was which way to finesse, Fortunately, I guessed right."

The kibitzer, tactfully, said nothing about his miscount, for who can quarrel with suc-

Signs Forecast Emphysema

One of the most miserable diseases of the lungs is emphysema, in which the tiny aveolae, or microscopic air sacs, rupture into one another, gradually causing the lungs to lose their elasticity. The victim of the disease has difficulty breathing. After he inhales, he finds it difficult to get the inhaled air out of his lungs.

Dr. Fred A. Obley, an expert on the treatment of emphysema, has written a book titled "Emphysema, A Doctor's Advice for Patients and Their Families." He warns people about the signs of an oncoming emphysema. The victim of the disease is likely to be a man — six times more men than women get the disease. The victim is also likely to be a cigarette smoker, to live in the city, to have frequent, heavy chest colds, and to be short of breath. Sometimes he wheezes when he breaths rapidly, and he probably has had a cough more or less continually over the years.

We doctors can recognize a person with advanced emphysema at a glance. The two main muscles in the front of his neck are markedly contracted, due to the effort he must make to lift up markedly contracted, due to the effort he must make to lift up his chest wall in order to get enough air into his lungs. It is easy to see that every breath he takes is an effort. He eventually becomes round-shouldered, and his chest usually becomes more barrel-shaped than oval. The person with advanced emphysema has a tendency to lean forward when he sits. He may seem to hold his shoulders up higher than normal, and he seems to raise his shoulders each time he takes a breath. In some cases, there is a certain amount of bronchiectasis, by which is meant a dilation and infection of bronchiectasis, by which is meant a dilation and infection of bronchi, or air-carrying tubes.

He is profoundly underweight, he is likely to tire more easily than he once did, and he is subject to coughing spells that sometimes seem as if they'll never stop.

Dr. Obley says that "all out war" on the disease cons Dr. Obley says that "all out war" on the disease consists of five elements: Drug therapy, meaning drugs taken by mouth, injected, or taken in the form of rectal suppositories; inhalation therapy, or the breathing in of drugs and chemicals, in the form of mists and aerosals, or the use of oxygen and mechanical respirators; respiratory physiotherapy, meaning the learning of special exercises that help the person to use new muscles in breathing; general exercise, such as welking and keeping active, which Dr. Obley feels is extremely important to the patient; and general health measures, meaning giving up smoking, being especially careful to avoid colds and flu, and learning to avoid things that tend to make the emphysema worse, such as house flust, feather pillows, animal dander, pollen, or rooms full of people, many of whom are smoking cigarettes. whom are smoking cigarettes.

One of the most helpful suggestions Dr. Obley makes is for the person to use "postural drainage," a technic which can help greatly in getting sputum out of emphysematous lungs. The patient lies on his stomach sideways across a bed, with his head resting on his forearms, which are resting on the floor, Because the upper part of the body is thus slanting downward, gravity helps in the process of draining mucus out of the lungs. In this position, the person is more likely to be able to cough "productively," as we doctors say.

My primary goal in seeking office in 1969, was to play a role in bringing about improvements in the vital field of health services. Medical research and technology have made it possible to diagnose and treat many allments which formerly could not be treated, for example, the use of heart pacemakers and valves, kidney machines, plastic joints to name a few. At the same time many ailments can now be managed quite briefly, with drugs, often without the need for hospitalization. The ever-increasing scope and intensity of all health services means increased costs, thus it is imperative that all facilities and highly trained personnel be utilized with the maximum efficiency. Each patient must receive the required level of care in the appropriate facility, no more and no less. Similarly each member of the health team must provide service which utilizes his or her highest degree of training. Care which can be provided effectively by a nursing assistant must not take up the time of an RN. Procedures which are capable of being done by an RN must not take up the time of a physician.

The phrase "levels of care" describes the key to efficient economic provision of top quality health services, ranging downwards from intensive care to home care. The tragedy in this area is not only a shortage of acute care beds but the use of existing acute beds by patients requiring a lesser level of care in a simpler type of facility, which the present government has failed to provide. A PC government will regard, the creation of such facilities to provide INTERMEDIATE care as a top priority. What this province so desperately lacks is a comprehensive integrated programme of health services created and developed by the provincial government in very close co-operation and consultation with the personnel actively engaged in every branch of the health care team. A PC government is dedicated to being a government that LISTENS to every segment of society. There is no area of PC policy where we will listen more intensely, than to the many dedicat

That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common affictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued.

WASHINGTON (Reuter) -The Nixon administration expects an early improvement in the United States balance of trade the president's Council of Economic Advisers said.

In a report to Congress on the state of the American economy, the council said last December's currency re-shuf-fle and divergent U.S. and and divergent foreign price trends and dethe trade account should soon

This view was endorsed in a press briefing by the treasury under-secretary for monetary affairs, Paul A. Volcker, who also said recent bouts of speculation against the dollar are unlikely to be repeated.

The administration looked for a diminishing role for goldin the monetary system, he said, adding: "I do not think this approach is inconsistent with this U.S. philosophy."

The undersecretary said the likely improvement in the trade balance together with the declared willingness of the American central bank to support its currency on foreign exchange markets should ease speculative pressures against the dollar.

In this context Volcker said he believes there will not be a recurrence of the type of rapid dollar outflow that occurred in late June and early July in the wake of the collapse of the British official exchange rate.

Auto Trade Deficits Rise Sharply

OTTAWA (CP) -OTTAWA (CP) — There was a $182,3 million deficit in trade in automotive products and parts in the first half of 1972, sharply higher than a $33.6-million deficit in the same period of last year, Statistic Canada reported.

The deficit resulted mainly from a boost in imports from overseas, principally Japan-ese-made automobiles, motorcycles, snowmobile engines, and automotive parts.

The surplus in Canada-U.S. automotive trade was virtually unchanged between the two half-year periods, running to about $90 million, Statistics Canada said.

In the first half of 1972, Canada sold $2.4 billion worth of automotive products to the U.S., and bought $2.3 billion. It sold $103.1 million in automotive goods to other countries, and bought $376.6 mil-

Decision Today On Oil Pipeline

Judge George Hart predicted that the case will then go through appeals as far as the U.S. Supreme Court, but said he could see no reason for delaying his opinion.

announcement came after hearing 11/2 days of argument, the culmination of more than two years of court battles, public hearings and general controversy over the pipeline.

Judge Hart originally halted construction of the $3 billion project to require the interior department to comply with environmental protection laws by holding public hearings and issuing detailed state-ments about the pipeline and alternative methods of getting the vast oil reserves of north-ern Alaska to markets in the mainland U.S.

Today's hearing was devoted to arguments that the pipe-line construction would require permanent alienation of public lands in excess of those which the law allows.

Dennis Flannery, a lawyer speaking for both Canadian and American conservationists who oppose the pipe-line, said that the interior department and the oil company consortium had tried to sell the court a "bill of goods" that restrictions in the law are meaningless. In fact, he when Congress passed the Mineral Leasing Act in 1920 it specifically debated how much land was necessary for pipelines and wrote in de-

Concerned that only 65 Freater Victoria landlords have volunteered to list their rental properties with him as part of a free referral service welfare and low income families, Nelson contemplates setting up a separate tenant

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) - Oilseeds were up to six cents lower at the close of the grain exchange today.

Active international house selling and reselling by locals pushed rapeseed futures well below previous close levels. Oats were mostly steady while barley and rye were lower on light trading.

Monday's volume of trade was 37,000 bushels of flax, 838,000 of rye and 1,362,000 of

Australia Eyes Mineral Links

ada's former high commis-sioner to Australia says the two trading partners at op-posite ends of the Pacific Ocean ought to move closer together on natural resources

Both are large countries with relatively small popula-tions, heavily dependent on raw materials, especially minerals to Japan, says Arthur Menzies, 55, for six years this country's top spokesman in Australia.

Canada and Australia together supply two-thirds of the important minerals that Japan imports, says Menzies, and a co-ordinated policy in this area could bring both countries bigger benefits.

Australia, like Canada and especially British Columbia, wants to develop processing more raw materials at home rather than exporting them,

But Australia is afraid that if it put in more copper smelters, the Japanese would turn more to Canada for the copper concentrates. Japan wants to continue to operate its purchasing agreements with the concentrate suppliers, get these suppliers in effect to subsidize Japan's efforts to reduce the pollution caused by the smelters.'

Menzies says if Canada and Australia got together and talked to the other suppliers of raw materials, particularly the developing countries, "we could all work up a pretty

FASTER SPEEDERS HARDER HIT

Fewer penalty points will be given to marginal speeding lators and more to excessive violators, Attorney General Leslie Peterson said today.

In a Motor Vehicle Act revision, effective this fall, penalties will be changed from the present three points for all violations to two points for exceeding speed limits by mp.h. or less, three points for 10 to 20 m.p.h., and four points for more than 20 m.p.h.

Four points, rather than three, will be deleted from drivers' records after one-year of infraction-free driving.

Drivers accumulating nine points are required to take a defensive driving course or face licence suspension.

ELECTION CORNER

My primary goal in seeking office in 1969, was to play a role in bringing about improvements in the-vital field of health services. Medical research and technology have made it possible to diagnose and treat many ailments which formerly could not be treated, for example, the use of heart pacemakers and valves, kidney machines, plastic joints to name a few. At the same time many ailments can now be managed quite briefly, with drugs, often without the need for hospitalization. The ever-increasing scope and intensity of all health services means increased costs, thus it is imperative that all facilities and highly trained personnel be utilized with the maximum efficiency. Each patient must receive the required level of care in the appropriate facility, no more and no less. Similarly each member of the health team must provide service which utilizes his or her highest degree of training. Care which can be provided effectively by a nursing assistant must not take up the time of an RN. Procedures which are capable of being done by an RN must not take up the time of a physician.

The phrase "levels of care" describes the key to efficient economic provision of top quality health services, ranging downwards from intensive care to home care. The tragedy in this area is not only a shortage of acute care beds but the use of existing acute beds by patients requiring a lesser level of care in a simpler type of facility, which the present government has failed to provide. A PC government will regard the creation of such facilities to provide INTERMEDIATE care as a top priority. What this province so desperately lacks is a comprehensive integrated programme of health services created and developed by the provincial government in very close co-operation and consultation with the personnel actively engaged in every branch of the health care team. The present Minister of the health care team. The present Minister with the primary role of co-ordinating and improving the work of all three departments.

Aussies Ban Shark Meat

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuter) — The multi-million-dollar shark fishing industry was threatened Monday by a Victorian state government ban on most shark meat

State Health Minister John Rossiter announced that 70 per cent of all shark meat sold in Victoria will be banned because an excess of mercury had been found in it.

Shark fishing also is banned, and spokesmen in the industry said later that it would be a disaster and the end of the shark fishing industry in Victoria, South Australia and Tasmania
